1. COMPETENCES AND LEARNING OUTCOMES

1.1. Competences

CB1 Have and understand knowledge in an area of study that is based on general secondary education, and is usually found at a level that, although supported by advanced textbooks, also includes some aspects that imply knowledge coming from the forefront of their field of study.

CB2 Apply their knowledge to their work or vocation in a professional way and possess the skills that are usually demonstrated through the elaboration and defence of arguments and the resolution of problems within their area of study.

CB3 Gather and interpret relevant data (usually within their area of study) to make judgments that include a reflection on relevant social, scientific or ethical issues.

CB4 Transmit information, ideas, problems and solutions to both a specialized and non-specialized public.

CB5 Develop the learning skills necessary to undertake further studies with a high degree of autonomy.

CG1 Identify the main theoretical contributions to the field of linguistic and literary studies.

CG2 Acquire the basic scientific knowledge applied to Foreign Modern Languages and its professional internships.

CG3 Develop reasoning and exposition strategies, written and orally, within the field of study of Applied Modern Languages.

CG4 Be aware of fundamental questions about the nature of language in order to understand its relationship with culture, society and other humanistic disciplines.

CG6 Use information and communication technologies and knowledge to organise, plan and develop academic and professional activities in the field of Applied Modern Languages.

CG7 Recognise, document, value and go in depth into linguistic, literary and cultural diversity in current context, drawing attention to its origins and future perspectives.

CG9 Use search tools for documental resources to study foreign modern languages and use own sources to study their corresponding literatures.

CE3 Efficiently apply in professional environments the techniques and resources related to linguistic mediation, language teaching, the improvement of mediated communication through technology and intercultural conflict resolution.

CE6 Understand the complexity of linguistic facts and literary works, appreciate their aesthetic values and their meaning in their socio-political context.

CE7 Prepare, present and defend an original piece of work, a synthesis of the skills acquired in the Bachelor.

CE8 Know and be able to manage concepts, methods and basic terminology of linguistics, literature and language acquisition.

CE12 Identify and understand the elements that define and articulate linguistic and literary studies as scientific disciplines and recognise their interdisciplinary character.

1.2. Learning outcomes

At the end of this subject, the student must:

- Mastery of communicative competence in the chosen language, applying oral and written communication strategies and adapting to diverse registers in both academic and professional contexts.
- Ability to relate the different linguistic, cultural, artistic or literary components associated with language A to research purposes, previously studied in this bachelor.
- Mastery and control of concepts, methods and advanced terminology specific to linguistics, literature, humanities, business or language acquisition.
- Ability to transmit ideas, knowledge and opinions, as well as to argue in English.
- Ability to generate and manage written production for academic and professional purposes.
- Ability to apply ICT to the field of Modern Languages.
- Ability to communicate the reflections and knowledge developed in research to others and to defend their dissertation before a board of experts.

2. CONTENTS

2.1. Previous requirements

The submission and viva of the B Bachelor's Dissertation will take place once the rest of the subjects of the syllabus have been passed.

2.2. Description of contents

The Bachelor's Dissertation demonstrates the range of degree competences acquired by students, as well as their readiness to enter the professional world.

The Bachelor's Dissertation fosters students' proactivity, resilience, and critical thinking as they defend their own research, which expands the contents seen in the Bachelor's in Applied Modern Languages.
